

IIOE Egypt National Centre Launch Ceremony

Concept Note & Agenda

11 May 2022

Background

The COVID-19 pandemic, technological revolution and evolving labour market needs have exposed the urgency of transforming higher education systems. In particular, digital transformation is key for Higher Education Institutions (HEIs) to adapt to the changing environment and developmental needs. However, due to the "digital divide" and other deeply entrenched inequalities, digital transformation can be challenging for the global south, especially Africa.

In response to this, the International Institute of Online Education (IIOE) was launched by UNESCO-ICHEI together with African and Asian HEIs and private sector partners in December 2019, endorsed by UNESCO. Since its establishment, IIOE provided a multilingual online education platform, teacher capacity building programmes in Big Data, Artificial Intelligence, online and blended pedagogy, and STEM online courses. It also developed the IIOE Quality Assurance Framework and Toolkit for Online and Blended Teaching and Learning, as well as the IIOE Competency Framework for the Higher Education Workforce. Since its launch, IIOE has benefited over 9,000 teachers in 135 countries worldwide.

Under the guidance of UNESCO's Priority Africa Strategy, the "IIOE National Centre" initiative was initiated by UNESCO-ICHEI in order to better serve the needs of HEIs in developing countries in terms of digital transformation. IIOE National Centre will serve as national/regional hubs for higher education digital transformation through research, capacity building, online course construction and sharing, technical support and networking.

As the IIOE founding member and the First IIOE Rotating Presidency Unit, Ain Shams University (ASU) and UNESCO-ICHEI have had substantial cooperation in ICT capacity building, digital infrastructure, academic exchange, and joint research since 2017. Based on multi-stakeholder consultations with UNESCO, ministries and partner HEIs, Ain Shams University will host the IIOE Egypt National Centre. The establishment of the IIOE Egypt National Centre will serve to empower the country's higher education through digital transformation, in alignment with the nation's development strategies, for a more sustainable, inclusive and equitable future.

To this effect, UNESCO-ICHEI is jointly organising the IIOE Egypt National Centre Launch Ceremony with the Egyptian Ministry of Higher Education and Scientific Research, Supreme Council of Universities, UNESCO Priority Africa and External Relations Sector, UNESCO Regional Bureau for Education in the Arab States (Beirut), and Ain Shams University.
